

COME TO HARTFORD

And Trade With FAIR BROS. & CO.

THEY ARE

Offering Larger and Better Inducements
FOR YOUR PATRONAGE THAN ANY HOUSE IN OHIO COUNTY.

Their Stock is the Largest!
Their Selections the Best!
Their Prices the Lowest!

For the months of November and December we will offer those who have not purchased their Winter Supplies, Goods at prices that have no parallel for cheapness. We sell you

Large White Blankets, all wool.....
Bed Bed Blankets, all wool.....
Bed Comforts.....
Extra Red Flannel (all wool).....
Best Twilled Red Flannel.....
Good Twilled Grey Flannel.....
Flannel French Turkey Red Table Linen.....
All Wool Jeans.....
Good Prints.....
Ten-cent Bleached Cotton.....
Apron Check Gingham.....
Linen Check Lingerie.....
Best Domesic.....
All-wool Shawls.....
Ladies Cloaks.....
Men's Box-toe Boots, whole stock.....
Men's Plain Toe Boots, whole stock.....
Boys' Plain Toe Boots, whole stock 12 to 18.....
Children's Plain Toe Boots, whole stock 11 to 18.....
Children's Plain Toe Boots, whole stock 7 to 10.....
Children and Misses Shoes (best).....
Ladies Shoes.....
Boys' Nice Suits.....
Boys' Nice Overcoats.....
Men's Nice Suits, all wool.....
Ten-dollar Overcoats.....

at $1 per pair

72 cents pair

at 16¢ per yard

25 cents

25 cents

25 cents

30 cents

Hartford Weekly Herald.

Wednesday, November 2.

CAMPAIGN POEM.

BY HADIE.

Vacate the White House, Benjamin,
A new reign must begin;
Dismiss the old crew,
And turn the ranks to new.

Set things to rights there, Benjamin,
For Cleveland's coming back;

The nation's work he must go;

His car is on the way.

His engineer is at his post,

His fireman is there too,

His brakeman is by.

There's little else to do.

Our Uncle Sam's conductor, too,

Has the right way.

With us all the way, together,

The knowing people.

The baggage car is loading up

With freight from Shazz's Bay,

And all the time we're over

Will all be on the way.

The eight of this November, Ben,

You know well what to here,

Say "Good-bye" to your mother,

And see the house to clear.

It's better to begin at once,

Now while you have a chance,

Yours will be the first to send

Your folks all back to home.

Our colored friends must have a chance,

The "grand old party" never has

For them a favor done.

The voters elected Harrison —

The people chose him —

And when he entered the frost door,

He sent them out the back.

The poor deluded creatures go,

Still to the frost door round,

They'll vote for him again.

A few, however, "catch on,"

Their eyes are open,

They see the house to clear;

The Democrats are coming back,

Like Henry Field — "to stay."

HARTFORD, KY.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Special Correspondence of THE HERALD.

WASHINGTON, October 29, 1892.

When the national campaign opened, decided to let the country people, the Republicans believed that it was

"the same old Democratic cry," as they expressed it, "victory before the election, but that before long the votes would be cast." The Republicans were then told that the Democrats would realize a defeat for the first vote was deposited in a ballot-box. The canvass is now rapidly drawing to a close, with the result of the election still uncertain. The outcome is constant, increasing rather than diminishing, and for the best of reasons. The outcome for the party in New York, generally regarded as the great pivotal State, has steadily improved, and within the past week has reached its highest point. Information reaches the capital that the leaders at Republican national headquarters in New York city are in a state of the greatest anxiety, and that the entire suite of men in the State and the nation are in hope of carrying the Empire State for Harrison lies in their success in "getting out every single reserve Republican voter who can be got." Our own men are in a state of high excitement, and that they are destined to win also is evidenced by the tremendous efforts they are making, apparently without very favorable results, to awaken the Republican voter from a sleep he has been in for months, since the very beginning of the campaign. They are marshaling all their most prominent speakers—men like of McKinley, William B. Bissell, Tom Reed, and others—in every town, and immediate vicinity, and will likewise concentrate all other available campaign orators in that State or Connecticut. The fact that Mr. Blaine—weak and desirous from wasting disease—has been compelled to give up his efforts to address a public meeting at a candidate's home, and that a further effort will be made in that direction in New York city, is but a faint echo of the sound he has fed sufficient evidence that the Republicans are in desperate straits to bolster up his failing cause.

Meeting the Republican managers in various cities, and turning up in hope of finding Indians in the ranks of the now here is that Democratic prospects are continually growing brighter, and that the State is now beyond all question of doubt secured to Cleveland. At the time that James G. Blaine's description of Harrison as "he is," said, has lost the Republican candidate thousands of votes. There are good reasons for doubt, that Democratic progress is not merely due to those of the Republicans for carrying both New York and Indiana. Richard Croker, the head of Tammany Hall, has pledged himself to New York city in this campaign. This, with the Democratic majorities of Brooklyn, New York's, and Richmond counties, means a Democratic majority in New York and Indiana, which will secure the State to Cleveland by at least 15,000 majority. With the two States of New York and Indiana in the Democratic column it is difficult to understand where the Republicans expect to find a safe seat in the Senate. The single Republican State, Iowa, have only 161 electoral votes, and there are added to these the States of Iowa, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Wisconsin, with a total of votes all of which are admitted doubtful—Harrison would then have only 214 votes, or less than a majority; hence, it will be necessary for the Republicans to win New York and nearly all the other doubtful States, which is hardly within the range of probability.

While the Democrat leaders are naturally giving the fight for the Presitheir best thought and attention,

the Congressional elections are not being decided. This is to say that the next House of Representatives will not be Democratic by a good majority, though, of course, no one expects such a result.

"I expect to see me" would have been the right thing for you to say; not "Please excuse me."

"I was disappointed in love, he died before we were to wed."

"I, too, dear Jane, was disappointed.

"Did he die?"

"Yes, he did."

"I am disappointed applicant for a certificate. We have been teaching almost continually for forty-three years, and we have had a school a thousand times

with a certificate less than the present outlook, that it will be Democratic.

There is little talked here at present

that is of much interest,

but the news from the outside world

is not good.

The baggage car is loading up

With freight from Shazz's Bay,

And all the time we're over

Will all be on the way.

The eight of this November, Ben,

You know well what to here,

Say "Good-bye" to your mother,

And see the house to clear.

It's better to begin at once,

Now while you have a chance,

Yours will be the first to send

Your folks all back to home.

The colored friends must have a chance,

The "grand old party" never has

For them a favor done.

The voters elected Harrison —

The people chose him —

And when he entered the frost door,

He sent them out the back.

The poor deluded creatures go,

Still to the frost door round,

They'll vote for him again.

A few, however, "catch on,"

Their eyes are open,

They see the house to clear;

The Democrats are coming back,

Like Henry Field — "to stay."

HARTFORD, KY.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Special Correspondence of THE HERALD.

WASHINGTON, October 29, 1892.

When the national campaign opened,

the Republicans believed that it was

"the same old Democratic cry," as they expressed it, "victory before the election, but that before long the votes would be cast." The Republicans were then told that the Democrats would realize a defeat for the first vote was deposited in a ballot-box. The canvass is now rapidly drawing to a close, with the result of the election still uncertain. The outcome is constant, increasing rather than diminishing, and for the best of reasons. The outcome for the party in New York, generally regarded as the great pivotal State, has steadily improved, and within the past week has reached its highest point. Information reaches the capital that the leaders at Republican national headquarters in New York city are in a state of the greatest anxiety, and that the entire suite of men in the State and the nation are in hope of carrying the Empire State for Harrison lies in their success in "getting out every single reserve Republican voter who can be got." Our own men are in a state of high excitement, and that they are destined to win also is evidenced by the tremendous efforts they are making, apparently without very favorable results, to awaken the Republican voter from a sleep he has been in for months, since the very beginning of the campaign. They are marshaling all their most prominent speakers—men like of McKinley, William B. Bissell, Tom Reed, and others—in every town, and immediate vicinity, and will likewise concentrate all other available campaign orators in that State or Connecticut. The fact that Mr. Blaine—weak and desirous from wasting disease—has been compelled to give up his efforts to address a public meeting at a candidate's home, and that a further effort will be made in that direction in New York city, is but a faint echo of the sound he has fed sufficient evidence that the Republicans are in desperate straits to bolster up his failing cause.

Meeting the Republican managers in various cities, and turning up in hope of finding Indians in the ranks of the now here is that Democratic prospects are continually growing brighter, and that the State is now beyond all question of doubt secured to Cleveland. At the time that James G. Blaine's description of Harrison as "he is," said, has lost the Republican candidate thousands of votes. There are good reasons for doubt, that Democratic progress is not merely due to those of the Republicans for carrying both New York and Indiana. Richard Croker, the head of Tammany Hall, has pledged himself to New York city in this campaign. This, with the Democratic majorities of Brooklyn, New York's, and Richmond counties, means a Democratic majority in New York and Indiana, which will secure the State to Cleveland by at least 15,000 majority. With the two States of New York and Indiana in the Democratic column it is difficult to understand where the Republicans expect to find a safe seat in the Senate. The single Republican State, Iowa, have only 161 electoral votes, and there are added to these the States of Iowa, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Wisconsin, with a total of votes all of which are admitted doubtful—Harrison would then have only 214 votes, or less than a majority; hence, it will be necessary for the Republicans to win New York and nearly all the other doubtful States, which is hardly within the range of probability.

While the Democrat leaders are naturally giving the fight for the Presi-

EDUCATIONAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

By W. L. Hawkins.

What numbers have 15 for greatest common divisor and 49 for least common multiple?

"I expect to see me" would have been the right thing for you to say; not "Please excuse me."

"I was disappointed in love, he died before we were to wed."

"I, too, dear Jane, was disappointed.

"Did he die?"

"Yes, he did."

"I am disappointed applicant for a certificate. We have been teaching almost continually for forty-three years, and we have had a school a thousand times

with a certificate less than the present outlook, that it will be Democratic.

There is little talked here at present

that is of much interest,

but the news from the outside world

is not good.

The baggage car is loading up

With freight from Shazz's Bay,

And all the time we're over

Will all be on the way.

The eight of this November, Ben,

You know well what to here,

Say "Good-bye" to your mother,

And see the house to clear.

It's better to begin at once,

Now while you have a chance,

Yours will be the first to send

Your folks all back to home.

The colored friends must have a chance,

The "grand old party" never has

For them a favor done.

The voters elected Harrison —

The people chose him —

And when he entered the frost door,

He sent them out the back.

The poor deluded creatures go,

Still to the frost door round,

They'll vote for him again.

A few, however, "catch on,"

Their eyes are open,

They see the house to clear;

The Democrats are coming back,

Like Henry Field — "to stay."

HARTFORD, KY.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Special Correspondence of THE HERALD.

WASHINGTON, October 29, 1892.

When the national campaign opened,

the Republicans believed that it was

"the same old Democratic cry," as they expressed it, "victory before the election, but that before long the votes would be cast." The Republicans were then told that the Democrats would realize a defeat for the first vote was deposited in a ballot-box. The canvass is now rapidly drawing to a close, with the result of the election still uncertain. The outcome is constant, increasing rather than diminishing, and for the best of reasons. The outcome for the party in New York, generally regarded as the great pivotal State, has steadily improved, and within the past week has reached its highest point. Information reaches the capital that the leaders at Republican national headquarters in New York city are in a state of the greatest anxiety, and that the entire suite of men in the State and the nation are in hope of carrying the Empire State for Harrison lies in their success in "getting out every single reserve Republican voter who can be got." Our own men are in a state of high excitement, and that they are destined to win also is evidenced by the tremendous efforts they are making, apparently without very favorable results, to awaken the Republican voter from a sleep he has been in for months, since the very beginning of the campaign. They are marshaling all their most prominent speakers—men like of McKinley, William B. Bissell, Tom Reed, and others—in every town, and immediate vicinity, and will likewise concentrate all other available campaign orators in that State or Connecticut. The fact that Mr. Blaine—weak and desirous from wasting disease—has been compelled to give up his efforts to address a public meeting at a candidate's home, and that a further effort will be made in that direction in New York city, is but a faint echo of the sound he has fed sufficient evidence that the Republicans are in desperate straits to bolster up his failing cause.

Meeting the Republican managers in various cities, and turning up in hope of finding Indians in the ranks of the now here is that Democratic prospects are continually growing brighter, and that the State is now beyond all question of doubt secured to Cleveland. At the time that James G. Blaine's description of Harrison as "he is," said, has lost the Republican candidate thousands of votes. There are good reasons for doubt, that Democratic progress is not merely due to those of the Republicans for carrying both New York and Indiana. Richard Croker, the head of Tammany Hall, has pledged himself to New York city in this campaign. This, with the Democratic majorities of Brooklyn, New York's, and Richmond counties, means a Democratic majority in New York and Indiana, which will secure the State to Cleveland by at least 15,000 majority. With the two States of New York and Indiana in the Democratic column it is difficult to understand where the Republicans expect to find a safe seat in the Senate. The single Republican State, Iowa, have only 161 electoral votes, and there are added to these the States of Iowa, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Wisconsin, with a total of votes all of which are admitted doubtful—Harrison would then have only 214 votes, or less than a majority; hence, it will be necessary for the Republicans to win New York and nearly all the other doubtful States, which is hardly within the range of probability.

While the Democrat leaders are naturally giving the fight for the President.

The American's Toast.

(Spontaneous.)

Benjamin Franklin was dining with a small party of gentlemen when one of them said:

"Here are three nationalities represented.

I am French, my friend here is English, and Mr. Franklin is American."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our

nationalities, but I will say this,

that we are the best nation in the world."

Franklin then rose and said:

"I am sorry to speak of our</